ITALIAN GOVERNMENT WILL ATTEMPT TO PROHIBIT ALL SEA TRAFFIC TO AUSTRIAN PORTS.

INVASION PROGRESSES

Some Announcements Claim Success for Advance of Italian Forces in Austrian Frontier Provinces.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Paris, May 26.—The Italian government today declared a blockade of all Austro-Hungarian ports.

Successful Advances.
London, May 26.—The Italian official announcement reviewing the first thirty-six hours of war, claims the capture of several Austrian towns just across the border, and the occupation of all frontier passes in Cadore together with a continuation of the successful advance on the Carinthia and the Friuli frontiers.

Vienna counters with the official claims that the Austrian naval raid inflicted considerable damage on the Italian coast.

The illness of King Constantine of Greece is the feature of the diplomatic situation in the near east. The death of this ruler, it is argued here, would end Greece's chief reason for maintaining neutrality.

Occupancy Austrian Territory.

Rome, May 26, via Paris, May 26.—Offensive operations resulting in the occupation of the Austrian territory along the frontier from Lombardy to the Adriatic, are claimed in an official statement issued today by the war office. Italian troops have seized various towns in the Trentino and forced their way through the mountain defiles.

Von Buelow's Statement.

Rome, May 26.—Prince Von Buelow, German ambassador, who now has returned to Berlin, is reported by the Giornale d'Italia to have declared in an interview that he came to Italy in the hope of bringing about a Austro-Italian rapprochement on concrete basis, that Austria undoubtedly always treated Italy unfairly and Germany attached supreme importance to the preservation of friendly relations with Italy which meant the maintenance of Italian neutrality. The public opinion must understand, however, that the prince said that attacks upon Austria meant attack upon Germany.

No Lights in Venice.

Venice, May 26.—The military authorities have given orders that no lights be displayed in Venice between sunset and sunrise that can be seen from above the city. This is a measure of protection against attack by aeroplanes. The aspect of Venice at night has been changed by this order.

Not to Intern Civilians.

Rotterdam, via London, May 26.—The Courant published a telegram from Berlin saying the Germans and Italians have agreed not to intern civilians nor seize their property.

Mr. Retailer, your customers are newspaper advertising readers.

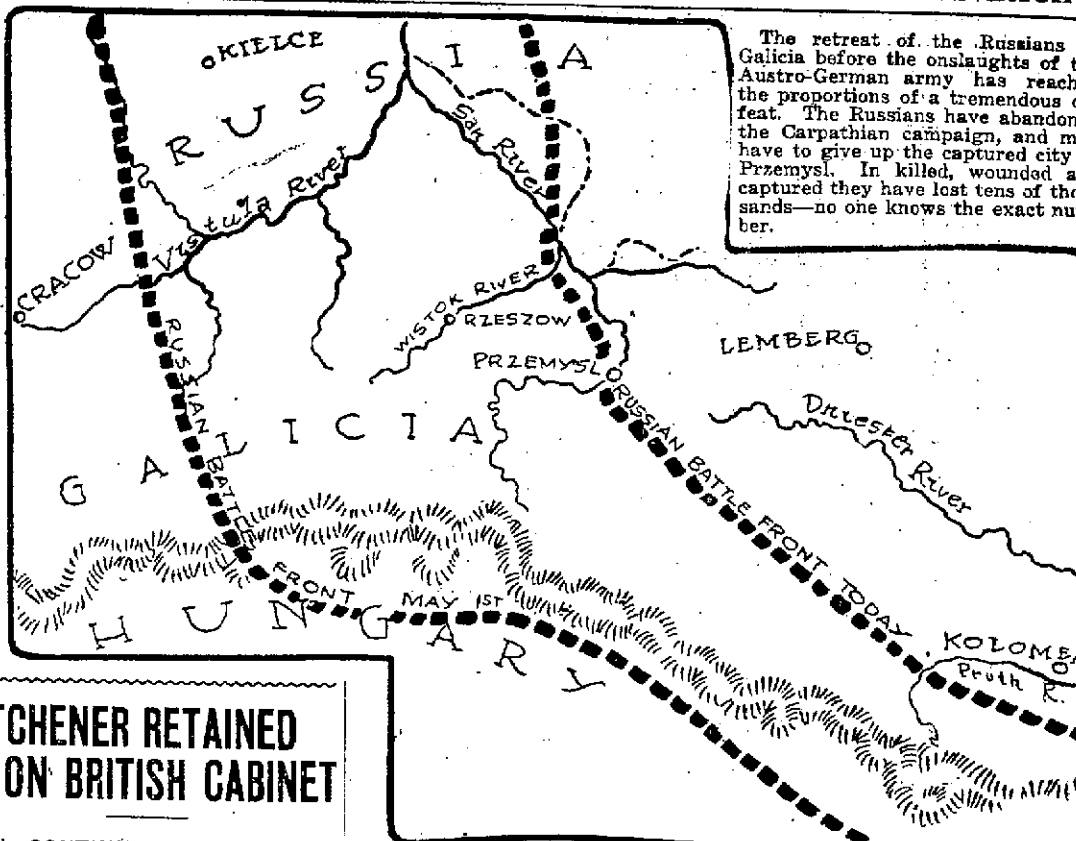

When they see a manufacturer's product described in the papers their interest is aroused. They want to see the goods.

If they have reason to believe your store is showing the goods they will go there.

That means business for you.

War News Summary

Italians have seized several towns near the border and forced their way through mountain defiles. It is stated the Austrians retired everywhere, destroying bridges as they fell back.

The new attack of General Mackensen against the Russian line north of Przemyśl, in Galicia, is reported from Vienna and Berlin to have been attended by conspicuous success.

The war office at Petrograd, however, states that an attack on the Russian line along the San river were scattered and conceded new victories to the Austro-German army.

On the west, the British have been compelled to give ground in Belgium to Germans who are once more pressing forward strongly along the part of the front which has been the heaviest sustained fighting of the war.

The allies apparently have offset this German victory, however, by French advance further south in northern France, near Arras.

The retreat of the Russians in Galicia before the onslaughts of the Austro-German army has reached the proportions of a tremendous defeat. The Russians have abandoned the Carpathian campaign, and may have to give up the captured city of Przemyśl. In killed, wounded and captured they have lost tens of thousands—no one knows the exact number.

Przemyśl is threatened by Germans.

Mackensen leads onslaught of Teutons advancing against Galician fortress.

Fight rages in west.

Germans make furious attacks in northern France, which put French lines to a severe test.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, May 26.—In the field of military operations, the great onslaught of General Von Mackensen against the Russian line to the north of Przemyśl and around Garoslaw, indicates that the power of the Austro-German offensive is not exhausted and verified the belief general in London that the Russians are not well equipped for the defense of this position.

Przemyśl has not been sufficiently prepared to rank against this great force. It is rather a heavily fortified camp which needs considerable artillery for its reduction.

Held Captured Trenches.

Along the western line of battle, the Germans hold trenches east of Ypres, which they captured Monday morning from the British and held against counter attacks during the day.

Yesterday the French offensive north of Arras, developed a new figure with the result that a number of German positions were captured. This French advance, like the German movement against the British, is not of wide extent, but it included some formidable works.

Violent German Attacks.

Paris, May 26.—The French war office reports:

"The check inflicted upon the enemy yesterday in the region of Angres and at a point north of the heights of Lorette, determined the Germans to come back with an attack of violence. There was furious fighting last evening and during the night. We were successful in retaining all our gains. Our troops gave evidence of magnificent courage and showed splendid tenacity and bravery."

The Germans in delivering counter attacks against the works we captured to the northwest of Angres, made furious attempts to take these positions time and time again.

Under Grilling Fire.

"At the end of the day we occupied almost the entire positions at Duval where we gained a footing in the afternoon. Here we are maintaining ourselves under a violent fire. At the same time we have gained an outlook on the heights to the northeast of Lorette, and we have captured a trench of the enemy in the environs of St. Quentin."

An artillery engagement of considerable severity developed yesterday in the region of Sclessens. There was another such encounter near Rheims.

French Aviators Active.

"During the day of May 26, our aviators showed great activity along the entire front and were successful in several endeavors to bombard the enemy. They threw down in all 203 projectiles, some of which weighed 22 pounds each."

The efficacy of this fire was proved at several points, particularly at a German aviation post located at Hevelly, to the northwest of Roisel, where a hangar and machine were set on fire at the German reserve aviation camp at Grand Preuil, to the northwest of St. Quentin.

BIG FREIGHTER RAMS
OCEAN LINER RYNDAM

TWO VESSELS SERIOUSLY DAMAGED IN COLLISION EARLY TODAY OFF NANTUCKET.

WARSHIPS BRING AID

Passengers and Part of Crew of Holland-American Steamer Are Transferred to U. S. Battleship.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, May 26.—The steamer Ryndam of the Holland-American line, bound from New York to Rotterdam with passengers and freight, collided with the freight steamer Joseph J. Cuneo today off Nantucket Island. Wireless messages received here said the Ryndam had transferred her passengers and part of her crew to the Cuneo, but that both vessels were badly damaged. It was reported that the battleship Texas and another steamer were going to their side.

The collision was reported to have taken place fifteen miles south of Nantucket about 4 a. m.

The Ryndam, a vessel of 7,976 tons, sailed from this port yesterday afternoon with seven hundred passengers in her first and second cabin, and 115 in her third cabin.

Are Making for Port.

The Cuneo is a Norwegian freighter of 546 tons. She plys between the Atlantic ports and the West Indies. It is believed she carried no passengers. Further message from the Ryndam said one of her holds was full of water and another hold, an engine room, was leaking. She reported she was steaming slowly toward this port accompanied by the Cuneo, and would continue to proceed as long as she was able to move.

Forty members of the Ryndam's crew remained on board, the message said.

The Ryndam's wireless became fainter and fainter, and it was difficult for the wireless station to communicate with her. Two warships of the Atlantic fleet hurrying to the assistance of the disabled vessels came up late yesterday night, about seven o'clock, and steamed along with the liner, which made very slow progress. The arrival of the vessel virtually insured the safety of those on board who were on board when the Ryndam was hit as long as she remained afloat.

Ryndam Increases Speed.

From wireless reports received later it appeared that the Ryndam was in the hold of the Ryndam had been checked and the steamship was able to increase her speed to twelve knots or more. Meanwhile the Cuneo had been checked and the Ryndam was able to increase her speed to twelve knots or more. Meanwhile the Cuneo had been checked and the Ryndam was able to increase her speed to twelve knots or more.

The extent of the Cuneo's damage had not been ascertained, but it could not have been serious, because immediately after the collision the Ryndam's passengers and part of her crew were transferred to the Cuneo.

A wireless message from Captain Heuvel of the Ryndam, made public by the Holland-American line at 9 o'clock, and received by them less than an hour after the collision, read: "150 miles from Ambrose. Hold five of water. Hold six, water gained. Engine room was damaged. Am proceeding thirteen miles speed. Passengers and 150 of crew safely on the Cuneo. American squadron standing by."

Apparent Escape on Battleship.

Apparently Captain Heuvel was not aware when he sent this message that the passengers had been transferred from the Cuneo to the battleship South Carolina. The Ryndam then boarded the Ryndam was announced the officers of the line as 77. There were 20 in the first cabin, 34 in the second, and 23 in the third. The crew numbered 200.

May Reach New York Tonight.

Dispatches sent during the forenoon by the South Carolina said the Ryndam was making thirteen knots an hour, but the nature of this speed, if maintained, would bring her to New York late tonight or early tomorrow. The Ryndam's cargo consisted chiefly of foodstuffs and was valued at approximately $100,000. It is said most of her passengers were Europeans returning home, and only a few were Americans. The owners of the Joseph Cuneo said she carried no passengers and the crew consisted of twenty men.

Cuneo Sailed from Boston.

Boston, May 26.—A wireless message to the radio station here stated the passengers and part of the crew of the Ryndam were transferred to the battleship South Carolina. The Joseph Cuneo sailed from Boston last night for Barrow, Cuba.

The collision occurred shortly after four a. m. in longitude 40.12 north and longitude 69.42 west. No detail is given as to the circumstances of the accident, but the nature of the damage sustained by either vessel, except that the Ryndam is taking considerable water.

Calls for Assistance.

Calls for assistance were answered by several steamers and by the South Carolina and other United States battleships. The transfer of the passengers and part of the crew occupied without mishap. The Ryndam then headed for New York at a speed of seven knots an hour, with the Cuneo close behind. The South Carolina came up with the two vessels soon after seven o'clock. At the request of Captain Aamodt of the Cuneo, the persons taken from the Ryndam were transferred to the battleship.

Fog Cause of Collision.

The message received did not state at what port the South Carolina might have been, but it was believed she might convoy the Ryndam to New York. Other messages stated the steamers collided during a thick fog. The Cuneo's bows were smashed in the collision. At nine a. m. the Ryndam, conveyed by the Cuneo and the battleships South Carolina, Texas and Louisiana, steamed toward New York at a speed of thirteen knots an hour. The water is said to be rising rapidly in her hold.

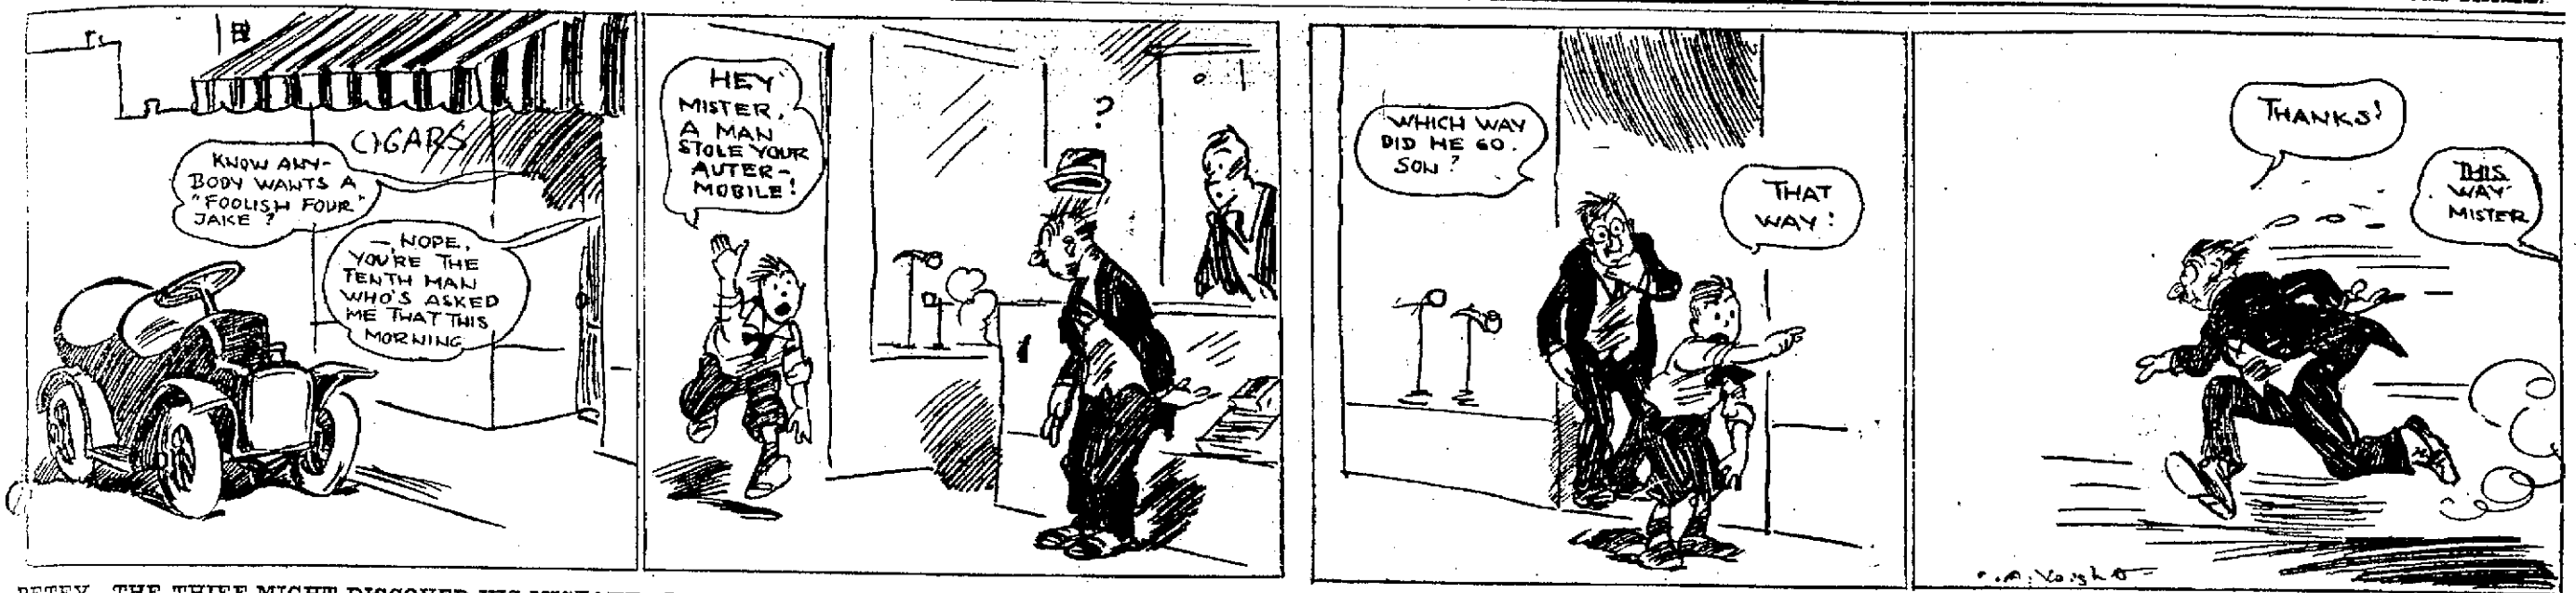

Keeps Up Speed.

New York, May 26.—A speed of 13 knots was maintained during the early afternoon. A wireless

DEATH OF WILDING ENDS GREAT CAREER

Celebrated Australian Tennis Player Meets War Fate in the Fighting at the Dardanelles. (By Hal Sheridan.)

New York, May 26.—Since the news of the death of Anthony F. Wilding, the great Australian tennis champion in the English campaign around the Dardanelles, tennis players in New York have not ceased to talk of his wonderful record.

And in the discussions of Manhattan tennis fans there has been heard much about the untimely death of a man who has been of as much value to the world as Wilding. The young tennis champ was a lieutenant in the Royal Marine Corps and he went to his death as bravely and as calmly as ever he faced an opponent across the net. He was in the prime of his career and rated as the greatest man who ever handled a racket in the history of the game.

Wilding was born in 1883 in New Zealand and was thirty-two years old. He began his tennis career when sixteen years old, but he did not learn to play until around 1905 when he met his first opponent as an international contender in the Davis Cup matches.

Wilding aided Norman Brookes in winning the Davis cup for Australia in 1908. In the same year Wilding, playing beside Ritchie, won the English doubles title. Wilding and Brookes were crowned tennis champions in that year and no one has appeared who was able to wrest their laurels from them.

But even greater victories came to Wilding in 1910 when he won the all-comers tournament at Wimbledon, England, and in the challenge round sent Gore down to defeat. In the doubles team with Ritchie, he won again.

Through the years until 1913, he was acclaimed the tennis champion of the world, winning all the singles in this time and holding practically every tennis title in Europe.

The memorable match between Wilding and McLaughlin in 1913 is still fresh in the minds of tennis bugs. Previous to their meeting not a few followers of the soft ball game placed their money on the American. When they faced each other, however, the great Wilding toyed with McLaughlin and won his game easily. That again clinched his title as the most wonderful tennis player in the world. In 1913 Wilding probably reached the zenith of his career, for he did not lose a set until the practice of the game as he had in former years and his game was slightly below his old time form.

But there was nothing even in his 1914 playing that could claim his claim to the world's title. He won it brilliantly and kept it consistently, meeting all comers and beating them as only a master can. Tennis players all over the world are still mourning his passing away.

Wilding's death is really the first instance of the killing of an athlete in this war, for while there have been numerous reports of the death of French and German athletes, they have never been confirmed. Wilding was one of England's biggest men in sport and there are none to gain say him to same title in battle. He died as he lived, fighting, square, and accepting defeat as bravely as ever he achieved a victory.

"Nothing will induce me to play with the Reds again,"—Ultimatum of Benny Kaut after the Giants turned him back. As it turned out, he meant "nothing but money."

WHITE SCORES K. O. VICTORY IN BOSTON

Chicago's Star Battler Easily Defeats Easterner in Boston Ring in Three Rounds.

Boston, Mass., May 25.—Charles White of Chicago, knocked out Fred Yelle, in the third round of a scheduled twelve round, boxing match here last night. Yelle is from Taunton, and had considerable of a reputation as a local fighter until last night, when he was a prey of White's left hook.

Yelle assumed the aggressive at the start, leading off at White with light punches and White got going in the second round when he pounded Yelle viciously with all the force for which he is noted. In the third round two left hooks when Yelle was coming sent him down for the count of nine, and when the Taunton light-weight was staggering from the effects of the two blows, White measured him with a powerful left, that knocked Yelle out for three minutes.

Nothing but words of praise can be heard on all sides for Clarence Rowland, the new manager of the Chicago White Sox, who succeeded Jimmy Callahan. One of the White Sox stars says: "This Rowland is a regular guy—always willing to go fifty-fifty with a fellow. Besides, he does not whine when his team gets licked, and is out there making us hustle."

BIG JESS WILLARD EXPECTS TO DEFEND HIS CHAMPIONSHIP

Jim Coffey Looms Up as Willard's Greatest Rival. Irishman Has Long Knock Out Record. (By Strikes.)

Word now comes that Jess Willard will defend the title to the ring for the shoe business and stage work has not proven the biggest money-maker in the world for the Johnson conqueror, and circus stunts and boxing do not harmonize. Jack Curley, who promoted the Havana fight, declared Big Jess will fight and all signs point toward Jim Coffey, Ireland's hope for the world's title, being his opponent. Late last night, when the date for the bout to be held in New York, but so far the negotiations between the boxers have fallen short of assuming any real indications of a fight.

At present Coffey is signed to battle "Porky" Flynn on the day named, but of course if he could improve himself would undoubtedly step out of this battle to meet Willard, for ten rounds, without a decision. Coffey is declared to have the "making" of a champion, but whether he has reached his best form is not determined as yet. Few thought Willard would ever be able to wrestle a time challenged Coffey to a draw, but the Irishman, who you'll turn the trick, upsetting calculations.

Has Long Record.
Coffey has risen suddenly in the limelight, for just four years ago he was a few greenbacks from the Out Sod, but he had the luck of the Irish. He came over and started as a teamster and then later as a motorman. One night his car was stalled during a traffic tie-up and the weather was frigid. A patrolman named Tom Shaw, who once was a fighter, climbed aboard Willard's car to get warm and after a time challenged Coffey to a wrestling match. The Irishman, who copper got flopped on his back and amazed at the motorman's strength, he invited him to come to the police station and learn the tricks about fighting.

From that time on, Coffey, who started, he arose to the most popular heavyweight in the east. He has never lost a decision and has 26-count knock-outs to his credit. He is regarded with having a good chance, as he is faster, aggressive, an instinctive fighter, and outclasses the champion as a boxer, having speed and footwork, which Willard lacks. Coffey has knocked out more men than Willard ever fought in his career and rivals critics who know both fighters believe Coffey will be the next man to wear the crown.

On the other hand, the inspired bugs can rave, all day about the wonders of Coffey, but at Newark, N. J., heavyweight named Charlie Weinert should come in for his share of air, when hopes are considered to beat Willard. Weinert is but nineteen years of age and has been boxing only two years, although he weighs but 180, he is growing, having started as a middleweight. This youth has waded through a career of ring experienced veterans and beat of all in Coffey, who he beat in a unanimous paper decision. Dillon beat Weinert by a knock out a year ago on a lucky punch, but still they stopped the battle and the records show the K. O. Weinert. Coffey at Philadelphia and the Newark boy dropped the big Irishman for the count of nine in the fifth round and the Dublin giant was almost out, the sell saving him when he was pretty gross.

Kilbane's Troubles.
Johnny Kilbane, king of the featherweights, is getting "in bad" with the eastern fans for his boxing, or rather his falling to box, in several Gotham bouts. When Johnny gets in the ring at a fancy price, against either a feather or lightweight, he generally does a tang and light slapping affair that makes the fans who have spent good money to see a fight, boil with rage. Kilbane cleaned-up in the feather and now is tackling the lightweight with the result that he is showing up many of the aspirants, by his great cleverness and speed. There is no better fancy boxer in the game than Johnny, who never exerts himself in a match. Kilbane seeks a match with Champion Welsh to obtain two titles, and if he would be serious against the Briton, he probably could beat Welsh at his own game, for he has more real cleverness in his right hand than Welsh has in his two.

Watson To Leave.
Red Watson, the California lightweight, will have one more battle before he sets sail for Australia, accompanied by Billy Murray, middleweight, and Joe Bond, heavyweight. Watson is matched to meet Joe Mandot at Newark on May 28th, which should develop some stirring action. Mandot is a clever battler, while Watson demonstrated in his recent battle with Welsh that he can hand out wallops and take care of himself against a clever man. The record of the battler sure has a wallon for the best up Frankie Snyder down at Kenosha, and Chicago again lost one of their world beaters.

Champion Freddie Welsh is billed to appear against Milburn Saylor at Indianapolis the night of the sweet-stake races. Saylor is a tough battler and is credited that he put Welsh to the mat for what he claims for a knock out at Windsor, three years ago. The referee called the blow a foul and there has been a grudge nursing between them since. The state officials have declared their intention of preventing the battle and what action will be taken is uncertain. A rival club at the auto race city offers a bout between Dillon and George Chip, and the competition is sure to turn both matches. It staged in an annual way, as both Dillon and Saylor are Indianapolis favorites.

The recent bout between Ad Wolgast and Ritchie Mitchell, in Milwaukee demonstrates again that the corner champ is "done" and it appears that Ad realizes this sad fact. Mitchell is an extremely light hitting clever battler and was able to evade Wolgast for ten rounds. There never was a bit of yellow in Wolgast, but his brittle bones, and age, have robbed him of his hitting power, his most valuable asset. He has the heart of lion as of yore, but the flash has gone.

Recently a Chicago alleged ring expert came to bat with the statement of Charlie White being legitimate lightweight champion. Considering what Dundee and Britton handed him, and his "punch" showing in several bouts, including the last with Welsh and Cross, this is out of the question. White has a long knock out record against minor lights, but he was never known to stop what was considered as champion candidates. He was lucky in his bout with Ritchie at Milwaukee, before the American lost his crown to Welsh, and that was the only battle the Chicago favorite ever won a popular decision against a leader.

Sport Snap Shots MORRIS MILLER

Ever hear of a pitcher using too much of stuff and too frequently? That's what two Indian twirlers are doing, according to the Red Sox players. They assert that Guy Morton and Fritz Coumbe are such hard workers that they put everything they have on every ball they serve to a batter. As a consequence, they say that Countie tires before the ninth inning and they predict Morton will do the same soon, though they say his fine physique now helps him out.

BOB BURMAN IN WAR AGAINST ASSOCIATION

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Indianapolis, May 26.—Bob Burman has declared war to the hit against the American Automobile association for having declared his Burman-Peugeot entry in the next Indianapolis 500-mile race a Peugeot, and refusing to let him start the car under any other title.

"The car is not a Peugeot," says Bob, "but literally what the name implies, a Burman-Peugeot. I spent a thousand dollars rebuilding the machine, so that it is half mine. To class it a Peugeot is a rank injustice to Alphonse Kaufmann, who already has a Peugeot entered, and those of whose cars will have to be withdrawn if I beat them out in the elimination trials. For this reason, I shall fight the matter to a finish, competing in the race, if necessary, under protest, and then settling the matter afterward."

ALEXANDER DEFEATS CUBS BY SCORE 3 TO 0; WHITE SOX WERE IDLE

Philadelphia, Pa., May 26.—Alexander pitched a superb form on Tuesday and Philadelphia won from Chicago 3 to 0, taking first place in the race from their opponents. Only one Chicago player got past second base. This was Zimmerman, who reached third on a wild throw by Byrne, only to be caught off the sack by Kihlner's quick throw to Byrne. Baker was put off the field for protesting when called out on strikes.

What's Caused the Washington Club to Lose Its Batting Eyes? Here's the answer of a Washington scribe.

There once was a manager of a boxer who, following a facing handed his protegee, admitted said protegee was defeated. That manager is now dead. He was too good to exist. Doubtless the shock occasioned by his statement hastened his death. The existence of a few like him possibly would incline deponents to take the words of managers more seriously.

What's caused the Washington club to lose its batting eyes? Here's the answer of a Washington scribe.

The Boston Braves, it is said, are hitting the first ball, figuring that opposing pitchers, knowing their tactics of last year, would expect them to wait, then out. On the other hand, the Phillies, who were known as first ball hitters under Dooin, are waiting out the pitchers to the limit. It wins either way—if you hit the ball early when you decide to swing, Shelden Lejeune might have stuck with the Pirates had the team been winning, for he was doing about as well as any of them, but with a losing streak, scribes and fans demanded that something be done, and Lejeune was the sacrifice. He goes back to Sioux City, where he should be a lifesaver for Brother Josh.

Shelden Lejeune might have been going badly in the Western league race, Costello, who succeeds him in the Pirate outfield, is a younger man than Lejeune and therefore a better prospect.

BACK UP ADMINISTRATION.

Now is the time for the members of the legislature elected on a platform for economy in the administration of state affairs, to stand by their governor. The difference between Governor Philipp and many others who have advocated economy in public affairs in the past is that Governor Philipp is really in earnest about it and means to succeed, if possible, in driving home his special message to the legislature urging economy to be effective in the future. He is not content with the forelock and sends them when they should be sent in and when they will do the most good. The old adage of "locking the barn door after the horse is stolen" never occurred to him in business life, and he locks the door firmly before there is a chance for a thief to enter by night. He regards his pledges made during the pre-primary and the actual campaign of last year, genuine statements to the public, and he means to use every effort in his power to redeem them. It is only by legislative enactment he can accomplish it, and the men who are standing behind him in his brave fight against the ultra progressives who see their idols shattered by cold facts, do so better fate than to be deserted in the time of need by other brethren who seek political preferment and self-preference. The Milwaukee Sentinel is correct when it says that the finances apparently at sixes and sevens, and with past commitments so far in excess of anticipated receipts that some of them will have to be repaid in order to get the state on anything like a balance basis, it certainly appears that the probably unconstitutional system recommended by Secretary Donald has made for legislative extravagance and landed the state in the present muddle.

Gov. Philipp as a business man and a conservative republican, wants a return to businesslike and constitutional methods in this matter.

As the people elected him largely on that proposition, and will hold him to his contract to straighten things out and reduce expenses, we think he is entitled to have his way in the choice of methods.

If he is thwarted and hamstrung by gentlemen who oppose reform and want to stand pat on the system that he was expressly elected to reorganize in the interest of the state, retrenchment and economy, the blame for resulting failures and disappointments for our taxpayers will not be on him.

WASHINGTON WAITS.

Washington is awaiting with the most intense interest Germany's reply to the last letter of this country calling that nation to account for the destruction of the "Lusitania," which resulted in the death of over one hundred Americans. The German ambassador, it is learned on unqualified authority, has recommended to his government a course which would doubtless obviate war, but which might to some extent embarrass the administration. The ambassador, Count Bernstorff, has urged the foreign office to yield, frankly and unequivocally, to the representations of the United States and to reply that hereafter Germany will refrain from attacking ships carrying passengers, whatever flag they may fly, unless there is opportunity to save all such passengers. In other words, that Germany will refrain from submarine warfare on passenger ships. The ambassador further recommends, however, that his government follow this statement with an earnest plea that the United States refuse clearance papers to any vessel carrying both passengers and contraband of war. Were this request complied with, the mere presence of passengers on a vessel which had cleared from a port of the United States would be a guarantee to German naval commanders that such vessel contained no contraband of war. It is suggested that so reasonable would be such a request that it is difficult to see how this government could well refuse to grant it. It remains to be seen, of course, whether the foreign office at Berlin will have the wisdom to take the ambassador's advice, but if it does the way to a continuation of peace and friendly relations with Germany will be clearly pointed.

WORLD'S POLICE FORCE.

If we may judge from reports, the present European war will, if the allies are victorious, witness the organization of an international police force to govern Europe. The New York Globe says of the situation: "Italy's declaration of war and her adherence to the ranks of the entente powers is likely soon to be followed by the entry of Roumania and Greece and probably Bulgaria." "It is commonly believed that defenselessness of their frontiers restrain Holland and Denmark from participation. At the beginning of the war Sweden was pro-German in sentiment through traditional fear of Russia, but there has been a great change in Swedish opinion. Norway is pro-ally in expression. Switzerland, on account of racial kinship of her people, is divided in thought, although still neutral as a country." "In recent years much has been said by peace theorists about the desirability of an international police force competent to suppress any disorderly nation that refused to submit a dispute to fair arbitration. The dream seems in process of realization, although in a different way than was anticipated. Germany brought on the war by supporting Austria's refusal to arbitrate, and the greater part of the world has come together to compel obedience to and respect for the interest of all in peace.

"The sweep of the alliances against the Teutonic powers suggests that the international police force has been established and that no nation in the future will dare to take independent action against a general protest."

CABINET HUMORIST.

The hitherto sedate secretary of agriculture has proved his undoubted right to the title humorist. Mr. Houston begs all farmers to urge the passage of laws to protect sheep from dogs. He says that domestic grown wool is important in the mills of the United States, and to that end the dogs should be destroyed, or at least controlled. Whether this is an inebriated reference to those democratic dogs who put wool on the free list, or is merely a disingenuous attempt to create the impression that it is the four-footed dogs and not the authors of the tariff bill which resulted in the importation, during the six months ending August 1, 1914, of $45,000,000 worth of wool as compared with $18,000,000 during the same portion of the previous year, Secretary Houston's report does not make clear.

Madison is this week entertaining the printers and editors of Wisconsin at the largest state meeting of these allied forces in many years. While the legislature in session it should prove most entertaining and instructive to all who participate.

Wet weather has seriously delayed both road building in the rural districts and the city as a whole. However, both city officials and contractors promise to make haste as soon as weather conditions improve.

To discourage flies war should be made upon the breeding places first of all. It is useless to pay a premium for swatting flies when their breeding places are not destroyed at the same time.

One would scarcely believe there was room for any other nation to get in line for an attack upon Germany and Austria now, but perhaps some opening wedge can be found.

It is said that Germany practically has its answer to President Wilson's note ready for sending, but thus far nothing definite has been learned of its contents.

Spring activities in baseball have brought about the baseball pools again and the authorities in many cities are waging a merciless warfare against their activity.

Sir Edward Carson's entrance into the English cabinet will hardly tend to make the European discussion more popular with the Irish home rule element.

Italy perhaps finds actual warfare less trying on its nerves than the anxious days of waiting to begin fighting.

We Don't Believe in Slans.
I bought some seeds down at the store
And tried to make two blades of grass
Grow where but one had grown before.
But, lo, it didn't come to pass.
I put a neatly painted sign:
"Keep off the grass," where all could see;
And people tramped that lawn of mine
And did it in the highest glee.

Folks who had ne'er done that before
Cut across my lot whenever they'd pass;
Footprints I found there by the score.
But not a sign of growing grass.
The moral of the tale is plain.
If bright new grass you would obtain,
Don't go and stick up any sign.

Characteristic.
The skipper of a trawler on naval patrol duty in the North Sea thought he would like some fish for breakfast, so he commenced operations. Soon up popped a German submarine close by. The skipper (from Aberdeen) was about to ram it, and earn the prize money when the submarine's command, not suspecting this evil intention, offered to buy fish. So the captain, not wanting to waste his fish, and then rammed the submarine.

A few Accidents.
The Coopersville Observer says: "Bill Mutton came near being killed Friday while shearing a sheep on his ranch. Just as he had about finished the wool gave a sudden jerk, preventing him from seeing a streak of lightning that was heading his direction at a two-forty gait. Bill reckoned he would have been killed outright if his wife hadn't seen his danger from the wooded window and ran out to where he was, kicking him aside just as the lightning turned the last corner."

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

By GEORGE BARR M'UTCHEON, Author of "Graustark," "Truxton King," Etc.

Copyright, 1915, by George Barr McCutcheon.

"No hard feeling on my part," I cried gladly. We shook hands. Jasper Junior slapped me on the back. "It's a most distressing, atavistic habit I'm getting into, knocking people down without time or reason."

"I daresay you had reason," muttered Collingraft. "I got what was coming to me." An eager light crept into his handsome eyes. "By Jove, we can get in some corking work with the gloves while I'm here. I box quite a bit at home, and I miss it traveling about like this. What say to a half hour or so every day? I have the gloves in one of my trunks. I'm getting horribly seedy. I need stirring up."

"Charmed, I'm sure," I said, assuming an enthusiasm I did not feel. Put on the gloves with this strapping, skillful boxer? Not if I was firmly resolved to stop while my record was good. In a scientific clash with the gloves he would soon find out what a miserable duffer I was.

"And Jappy, here, is no slouch. He's as shifty as the dickens."

"The shiffter the better," said I with great aplomb. Jasper Junior struck out his chest modestly and said, "Oh, piffle, Colly." But just the same I hadn't the least doubt in my mind that Jasper could "put it all over me." It was a rather sickening admission, though strictly private.

We made our way to my study, where I mildly suggested that we refrain from mentioning our little encounter to Mrs. Titus or the countess. I thought Collingraft was especially pleased with the idea. We swore secrecy.

"I've always been regarded as a peaceful, harmless grub," I explained, still somewhat bewildered by the feat I had performed and considerably shaken by the fear that I was degenerating into a positive ruffian. "You will believe me, I hope, when I declare that I was merely acting in self defense when I—"

He actually laughed. "Don't apologize," he could not resist the impulse to burst out once more. "By Jove, I didn't think you could do it." "With my left hand, too," I said wonderingly. Catching myself up, I hastily changed the subject.

A little later on as Collingraft left the room, slyly feeling of his jaw, Jasper Junior whispered to me excitedly, "You've got him eating out of your hand, old top."

Things were coming to a pretty pass, said I to myself when I was all alone. It certainly is a pretty pass when one knocks down the ex-husband and the brother of the woman he loves and quite without the least suspicion of an inherited pugnacity.

I had a little note from the countess that afternoon, ceremoniously delivered by Helene Marie Louise Antoinette. It read as follows:

You did Collingraft a very good turn when you told him how this comes. He is tremendously interested in his prowess. He is a boxer or a boxer, or whatever it is in athletic parlance. He has been like a lamb all afternoon, and he really can't get over the way you whacked him. (What the word?) At first he was as mum as could be about it, but I think he really felt relieved when I told him I had seen the whole affair from a window in my hall. You see, it gave him a chance to explain how you got in the whack, and I have been obliged to listen to intermittent lectures on the many art of self defense all afternoon, first from him, then from Jappy. I have a headache and no means of defense. He admits that he deserved it, but I am not surprised. Colly is a sporting chap. He hasn't a mean drop of blood in his body. You have made a friend of him. So please don't feel that I hold a grudge against you for what you did. The funny part of it all is that mamma quite agrees with me. She says she deserved it. Mamma is wonderful, really, when it comes to pinning. She has given up all thought of "putting a foot outside the castle." Can you have lunch with us tomorrow? Would it be much trouble if we were to have it in the lodge? I am just mad to get out of doors if only for an hour or two in that walled-in spot. Mr. Popen-Dyke has been perfectly lovely. He came up this morning to tell me that you have not sneezed at all and there isn't the remotest chance now that you will have a cold. It seems he was afraid you might. You must have a very rugged constitution. Britton told Blake that most men would have died from exposure if they had been put in your place. How good you are to me.

ALINE T. F. S.—I may come down to see you this evening.

I shall skip over the rather uninteresting events of the next two or three days. Nothing of consequence happened unless you are willing to consider important two perfectly blissful nights of sleep on my part; also I had the pleasure of taking the countess "out walking" in my courtyard, to use a colloquialism, once in the warm, sweet sunshine, again "neath the glow of a radiant moon." She had not been outside the castle walls literally in more than five weeks, and the color leaped back into her cheeks with a rush that delighted me. I may mention in passing that I paid particular attention to her suggestion concerning my dilapidated, gone to seed garden, although I had been bored to extinction by Jasper Junior when he undertook to enlighten me horticulturally. She agreed to come forth every day and assist me in building the poor thing up, propping it, so to speak.

As for Mrs. Titus, that really engaging lady made life so easy for me that I wondered why I had ever been apprehensive. She was quite wonderful when "it came to a pinch." I began to understand a good many things about her, chief among them being her unvoiced theories on matrimony. While she did not actually commit herself, I had no difficulty in ascertaining that, from her point of view, marriages are not made in heaven and that a properly arranged divorce is a great deal less terrestrial than it is commonly supposed to be. She believed in matrimony as a trial and divorce as a reward, or something to that effect.

My opinion seemed to carry considerable weight with her. For a day or two after our somewhat sanguinary encounter she was prone to start, even to jump slightly, when I addressed myself to her with unintentional directness. She soon got over that, however.

We were discussing Aline's unfortunate venture into the state of matrimony, and I, feeling temporarily august and superior, managed to say the wrong thing and in doing so put myself in a position from which I could not recede without loss of dignity. If my memory serves me correctly I remarked with some asperity that marriages of that kind never turned out well for any one except the bridegroom.

She looked at me coldly. "I am afraid, Mr. Smart, that you have been putting some very bad notions into my daughter's head," she said.

"Bad notions?" I murmured. "She has developed certain pronounced and rather extraordinary views concerning the nobility as the result of your—ah—argument, I may say."

"I'm very sorry. I know one or two exceedingly nice noblemen, and I've no doubt there are a great many more. She must have misunderstood me. I wasn't running down the nobility, Mrs. Titus. I was merely questioning the advisability of elevating it in the way we Americans sometimes do."

"You did not put it so ably in discussing the practice with Aline," she said quickly. "Granted that her own marriage was a mistake, a dreadful mistake, it does not follow that all international matches are failures. I would just as soon be unhappily married to a duke as to a dry goods merchant, Mr. Smart."

"But not at the same price, Mrs. Titus," I remarked.

She smiled. "A husband is dear at any price."

"I shouldn't put it just that way," I protested. "A good American husband is a necessity, not a luxury."

"Well, to go back to what I started to say, Aline is very bitter about matrimony as viewed from my point of view. I am sorry to say I attribute her attitude to your excellent counseling."

"You flatter me. I was under the impression she took her lesson of Tarnowsky."

"Granted. But Tarnowsky was unfit. Why tar all of them with the same stick? There are good noblemen, you'll admit."

"But they don't need rehabilitation." "Aline, I fear, will never risk another experiment. It's rather calamitous, isn't it? When one stops to consider her youth, beauty and all the happiness there may be—"

"I beg your pardon, Mrs. Titus, but I think your fears are groundless."

"What do you mean?" "The countess will marry again. I am not betraying a secret, because she has intimated as much to my secretary as well as to me. I take it that as soon as this unhappy affair is settled she will be free to reveal the true state of her feelings toward—"

I stopped, somewhat dismayed by my garrulous turn.

"Toward whom?" she fairly snapped. "I don't know," I replied truthfully and, I fear, lugubrously.

"Good heavens!" she cried, starting up from the bench on which we were sitting in the loggia. There was a queer expression in her eyes. "Haven't—hasn't she ever hinted at—hasn't she mentioned any one at all?"

"Not to me."

Mrs. Titus was agitated. I could see that very plainly. A thoughtful frown appeared on her smooth brow, and a gleam of anxiety sprang into her eyes. "I am sure that she has had no opportunity to—"

She did not complete the sentence, in which there was a primary note of perplexity and wonder.

It galled me to discover that she did not even so much as take me into consideration.

"You mean since the—er—divorce?" I inquired.

"She has been in seclusion all of the time. She has seen no man—that is to say, no man for whom she could possibly entertain a—"

But, of course, you are mistaken in your impression, Mr. Smart. There is absolutely nothing in what you say."

"A former sweetheart, antedating her marriage," I suggested hopelessly.

"She has no sweetheart. Of that I am positive," said she with conviction.

"She must have had an army of admirers. They were legion after her marriage. I may be pardoned for reminding you."

She started. "Has she never mentioned Lord Amberdale to you?" she asked.

"Amberdale?" I repeated, with a queer sinking of the heart. "No, Mrs. Titus. An Englishman?"

She was mistress of herself once more. In a very degage manner she informed me that his lordship, a most attractive and honorable young Englishman, had been one of Aline's warmest friends at the time of the divorce proceedings. But of course there was nothing in that! They had been good friends for years, nothing more, and he was a perfect dear.

But she couldn't fool me. I could see that there was something working at the back of her mind, but whether she was distressed or gratified I was not by way of knowing.

"I've never heard her mention Lord Amberdale," said I.

Her eyes narrowed slightly. Had I but known, the mere fact that the countess had not spoken of his lordship provided her experienced mother with an excellent reason for believing that there was something between them. She abruptly brought the conversation to a close and left me, saying that she was off for her beauty nap.

CHAPTER XXII. The Deal.

ALONE I soon became a prey to certain disquieting thoughts. Summed up they resolved themselves into a condition of certainty which admitted of but one aspect—the charming countess was in love with Amberdale. And the shocking part of it all was that she was in love with him prior to her separation from Tarnowsky! I felt a cold perspiration start all over my body as this condition forced itself upon me.

He was the man. He had been the man from the beginning. My heart was lead for the rest of the day, and very curiously for a leaden thing it was subject to pain.

Just before dinner Britton, after inspecting me out of the corner of his eye for some time, advised me to try a little brandy.

"You look seedy, sir," he said, with concern in his voice. "A cold setting in, perhaps, sir."

I tried the brandy, but not because I thought I was taking a cold. Somehow it warmed me up. There is virtue in good spirits.

The countess was abroad very early the next morning. I discovered her in the courtyard, giving directions to Max and Rudolph, who were doing some spading in the garden. She looked very bright and fresh and ending in the light of an early moon, and I was not only pleased, but astonished, having been led to believe all my life that a woman, no matter how pretty she may be, appears at her worst when the day is young.

I joined her at once. She gave me a gay, accusing smile.

"What have you been saying to mother?" she demanded as she shook hands with me. "I thought you were to be trusted."

I flushed uncomfortably. "I'm sorry, countess. I—I didn't know it was a secret."

She looked at me somewhat quizzically for a moment; then she laughed softly. "It is a secret."

"I hope I haven't got you into bad odor with you?"

"Oh, dear me, no! I'm not in the least worried over what mother may think. I shall do as I please, so there's the end of it."

I swallowed something that seemed to be sticking in my throat. "Then it is true that you are going to marry?"

"Quite," she said succinctly. "I was silent for a moment. 'Well, I'm—I'm glad to know it in time.' I said rather more gruffly than was necessary."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A collector entered Smith's flat, pushed into the parlor, and said to Smith's little son:

"Where's your father?"

"Gone away," the boy answered, according to orders.

"Gone away? Humph! Where to?" "That, closet there," was the reply.

One day, while her grandfather was paying a visit to Florence's home, the little girl said to him:

"Grandpa, your talk about 'perseverance winning' is all nonsense."

"Well, well, child!" cried the grandfather, "why do you say that?"

"Why," said the little girl, "I've worked all the afternoon blowing bubbles and trying to pin them on mother's hat."

Pat had just come over from the old country to work with his brother, who was butler in a millionaire's home.

The first morning Pat tried his hand at answering the telephone. Disaster resulted. Mrs. Bucks called up.

"Answer that," ordered the butler. "If it is Mrs. Bucks, tell her to 'hold the line.'"

Pat took down the receiver and listened. "Is Mrs. Rich there?" a voice asked.

No answer from Pat. "Who is that at the phone?" in a madder tone.

"It's me, Pat."

"I want Mrs. Rich—this is Mrs. Bucks," said the lady in anger. "Alright," said Pat. "Just hold the rope."

THE FIRST CUTTING OF ALFALFA CROP TOLD BY A. WEST

Correspondent Claims Fields Are New in Shape With Prospects Good.

In spite of a dry April, the prospects for the first cutting of alfalfa is good. Fields are looking fine and it will not be long before the first cutting will be ready.

Those growers who belong to the alfalfa order have received the following circular letter of instructions about cutting. By the way, why not all join the alfalfa order? Its object is to promote the growing of this crop, and its dues are only 25c. In return one gets valuable instruction such as follows here.

About Cutting the First Crop.

Cut it early. When the alfalfa plants have just budded out and a few flowers can be seen, go into the field and examine the little shoots or sprouts at the base of stems. These are the starting points of the next crop. When they average from one quarter to three quarters of an inch in length the field is ready to cut. Don't delay the cutting until the entire field is in blossom because grow rapidly and may become two to four inches in length. The mower will then cut them off and the alfalfa crop will be checked and delayed in its growth from two to three weeks until new stems and leaves get started again at the base of the plants.

It is important then to cut the alfalfa at the right stage. If the second crop is delayed two or three weeks the third crop will not be ready by the first of September and it is generally not safe to cut alfalfa any later in the fall than this date. If alfalfa is cut at the right stage each time three cuttings can be practically always secured by winter. Any danger of cutting the last crop too late in the fall. Never cut alfalfa too closely. Set the sickle bar so it will leave a stubble of at least two inches.

Yours truly,
A. WEST.

SECRETARY ALFALFA ORDER.

If not already provided with hay caps for alfalfa, it is none too soon to begin getting them ready. Better have the material on hand and ready to work on should a rainy day prevent work in the field.

Hoar's Dairyman gives the experience of a Michigan man in making hay caps, who used 100 lbs. flour sacks obtained from a bakery, at the rate of one sack to each acre of alfalfa. These sacks being of good material, they were used, the boys of the family utilizing the rainy days in the field cutting and getting the sacks squared up. These were supplied with weights made of cement, one part sand and three parts cement, spread in two layers, the top in loose sand and being stuck into each square. As soon as the cement had hardened sufficient, it was cut down to the bottom of the boxes, so that the caps were in the form of 2-in. cubes with a staple in the top of each. These were fastened to the caps with blind stitching, each string being about 18 inches long. They were then fastened into the staples in the weights and tied to the corners of the caps by cutting a slit about two inches up from each corner and bringing both ends of the twine through the slit, making a sort of slip knot.

To facilitate the handling of the caps, a lead much like a stone boat was made with a pole at one end, long extending lengthwise above the sled on which the finished caps were hung, the weights resting on the sled. When the caps were wanted, a horse was hitched to the sled and it was hauled to the field from one haycock to another. It was also used to collect the caps.

Some farmers prefer round weights to square ones, and at Iowa man writing for the Dairyman gave his method of making them from cement by using as molds strips of straw board secured at the end of a pole and cut into strip 2 1/2 x 3 1/2 inches, then dampened and bent into a circle and secured with rubber bands.

If one uses square weights, they should not be less than six corners, the sides being equal. The writer avoids all trouble of making weights and securing them with twine by attaching heavy wires. No. 8 brass wire, to be fastened to the cap. With a pair of stout wire cutters, one end of wire is bent back upon itself to form a stout hook. The point of the cap at each corner is folded back two corners, the folded edges turned together and the point thus formed turned back as before and the edges again folded. This makes a bunch upon which the hook is placed and with pliers is pressed down, securing the wire firmly without danger of tearing the cap. These wires are then stuck into the haycocks.

Hay cured under them is of better quality and contains more protein than that cured without caps.

AMERICAN SCHOOL TO BE ITALIAN HOSPITAL

Cousin of Janesville Residents Plans to Remain in Florence to Nurse Wounded in Italian Battles.

According to dispatches from Madison, Miss Georgiana Sheldon of that city, a cousin of Mrs. S. M. Smith and F. S. Sheldon of Janesville, who has been conducting a famous girls' school in Florence, Italy for four years past, will remain in Italy during the present war and take an active part in the Red Cross work being organized there. Several years ago Miss Sheldon and Miss Mary Nixon of Chicago purchased an old palace in Florence, where they conducted a school at which many American girls have been educated. At the present time it is expected this school will be transformed into a hospital, and as Miss Sheldon has taken an active interest in the Red Cross work during the past winter, having been elected one of the executive committee of Madison, believes she will remain in Italy, at least for the present.

Obituary.

Mrs. Minnie Merton Hubbell, wife of William Hubbell, of Fulton, died early Saturday morning, after an illness of a month's duration. She was one of the best known and respected ladies of the community. Her father, as Alfred Isham of Stoughton, and her mother, Cecelia Hale of Stoughton. Both parents died during her childhood and she lived thereafter mostly with her cousin, Percy Hale of Stoughton. She was married to William Hubbell of Fulton June 25, 1902, and has since resided there, taking a deep interest in the welfare of the church and the community.

All through her life she has been known for her unselfishness and devotion to her home and friends, and while she has never been robust in health, she always was ready and willing to help in any good cause for the betterment and happiness of her neighbors. The large attendance at the funeral yesterday was an eloquent testimony of the esteem in which she was held, and the deep sympathy goes out to her husband and other relatives in their irreparable loss.

Funeral services were held at her late residence Monday and were conducted by Rev. Fisher of the Universalist church in Stoughton, the church where she had been brought up, and Congregational church, where she was a member. The remains were conveyed to Stoughton, where interment was made, short services at the grave being conducted by Rev. W. A. Leighton.

LIFE INSURANCE MEN DEBATE ON TAXATION METHODS OF THE STATE

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Madison, Wis., May 26.—Officials of Wisconsin life insurance companies clashed before the joint finance committee yesterday afternoon, respecting the taxation of life companies. Dr. W. A. Fricke, representing the Great Northern Life Insurance company of Wausau, and appearing for four others of the newer Wisconsin companies, advocated the Albers bill, 55-8, omitting the tax on Wisconsin premiums and providing otherwise for the taxation of companies. The plan desired by the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company, known as the income tax option, was defended by its author, T. S. Adams, of the tax commission, and Henry F. Tyrell of the company. Dr. Adams and Dr. Fricke indulged in a sharp colloquy over the interpretation of taxable net income.

Dr. Fricke, who talked for an hour, maintained that to place domestic companies on a basis proposed in the Adams substitute would be greater to their disadvantage when the 24 foreign companies return to the state, as they are likely to do when the Bondarch bill is enacted. He maintained it is right to allow the companies to come back, but that home companies should be given an even chance so that their state taxes shall not be discriminatory.

It has already become recognized as the favorite transportation servant of the Doctor, Lawyer, Merchant, Banker, Real Estate Agent, Contractor, Grocer, Baker, Druggist, Laundryman, Farmer—in fact, there is no Organization, Society, Company, business, age, sex or condition, time, space or requirement, it will not serve—and every person looking upward, not downward, forward, not backward, wise in the foresight necessary to apply results of the future to the needs of the present, should seriously consider the purchase of a Ford car. It is not only the best delivery, but the best Goods as well, quality, utility and price considered, and it will always lead the field.

The whole round earth is our market, but there are only 800,000 Fords now in use. We intend to make these figures many, many times larger within the next few years, and move the old world forward fifty years.

WOMEN'S CLUBS AND THEIR ACTIVITIES

(EDITED BY MRS. ABBIE HELMS.)

REST ROOM PROPOSITION.

WOMEN ARE READY FOR IT.

Have Committees Appointed and Funds Available for Immediate Use.

A great deal of enthusiasm has been aroused among the women of this city by the project of a public comfort station for women. They feel that it is a subject too long neglected, and a need that should be remedied at once. The plan for the movement has been started and has had so much encouragement from the women of the city, there is no doubt that it will be carried through in some form or other. The plan for using the basement of the library is to their minds impracticable, then some other place must be provided for that purpose. The plan has been to build a building like Banquo's ghost "it will not down." Committees have been appointed from several of the clubs and at least three clubs have arranged for a fund to be placed in the hands of their committee for instant use. Until other plans may be formulated to care for the rooms, it has been suggested that all organizations of women in the city would be interested in this undertaking. Church societies, lodge fraternities, the Catholic women and the various auxiliaries of the men's organizations could help in the project. The plan would be to have a committee of the city should be interested in, as it is for the comfort and convenience of all. And if any of the organizations would like to help in the project, one of the members of the committee will meet with them and talk over their plans and needs, especially in the equipment of the rooms, where the help will be most needed and it has also been suggested that when the time comes to fit up this room, it would seem more personal and intimate if the members of the organizations could have some particular thing most needed in the furnishing. As for instance, the curtains and fittings, a rug or a writing desk, with its appointments. A chair, a table, a lamp, a clock, a mirror, a small relative with a brass plate upon it signifying the fact, would be a perpetual reminder of the great truth that we need services for the poor, quite as much as we do for those who are better off. The Philomathian club are to fit up a children's corner and have the little bed, pillows and screen and a small table. And not only the women of the city but the men of the country cannot fail to support the venture. It will be a place belonging especially to the women, not only of our home town, but also to those who are in the country. The question has been as to this project will interfere with the plans of the Civic League in regard to a Y. M. C. building. And the answer is, no. The league officials themselves are of the opinion that in fact they feel that it will help their cause in raising public sentiment in favor of service and in awakening the civic conscience toward doing something for others. Their building will be for girls and young women exclusively. They cannot accommodate the general public. The Civic League has not endorsed the plan because they have not had a meeting since the movement was started. But the commissioners and other officials are all in hearty sympathy with the plan, and the matter will be presented before the league at their next meeting, the first Monday in June.

To those who are impatient concerning the modest plans already made for the building, the answer is, that the great things have grown from small beginnings; that at present there is not public sentiment enough to warrant a large financial outlay. The complete equipment and the permanent matron will come in time and that speedily, if the women rally to the support of this undertaking as they have promised to do. It is only three months in Beloit that the great public sentiment into the feeling that their Beloit Center was something "they must have." And Janesville is not so slow as it might be when it once becomes convinced of a good thing.

It is like the individual from Missouri, who wants someone to "show me." But after the need is shown and properly explained, the citizens rally to the support of a good thing, and never let up till it is accomplished. So if the women of Janesville show that they are back of this movement, they can have anything they want.

THE COUNTRY COMMUNITY.
At Spring Green, Wisconsin, a town of six hundred, the town and the rural community are uniting to build a little plaster building to cost one thousand dollars, for the art and cookery departments of an inter-county fair, with a restaurant and a garden in connection. The remainder of the year, the building is to be a woman's exchange for the counties, and a roadside tea house for automobiles—to be cared for at first by volunteer help, and later by a paid matron. At Green Bay, Wisconsin, the county women are united to the county board for the use of the old courthouse when a new one was built, and the board gave it, together with the thousands of dollars for equipment. The building stands perhaps the first woman's county building in the country, put to maintain the use for the community life of the whole county.

In this, as in everything, the great thing is to see the possibilities, and to make a practical beginning. Then the thing grows in size, which nobody could have prophesied.

ART LEAGUE HISTORY.—1915.

Now it came to pass on the 22nd day of the 5th month, in the year of one thousand nine hundred and fifteen, it was appointed by those in authority unto a woman whose pen was a woman's club called the Janesville Art League, and after this was about to be performed (even if not well) to read the writings before the club members on the 21st day of the fifth month of the year 1915.

Now it came to pass after the issue of this mandate that the appointed scribe grasped her pen, and, forth with a mighty trepidation, set forth the great events of the latest year of the league's life. Year, the 21st year; the league which has drawn of level, has gone from tent to tent and from one tabernacle to another, leaving vast and cherished sessions to hang unprotected upon the impossible colored walls of the of the reign of an efficient, popular and all-around successful president, many noble things did come to pass. Concerning which the heart of woman "apathy" is a disease of the affliction troubling (or not troubling) many of the art tribe, not so afflicted is the month's president. Ever alert for the acclaim the grand adventure for her tribe at the year's close—a written in the order of its happenings in that follows.

And now it came to pass through the earnest agency of the league, a woman well known and favorably among the name of Ella Housling Tanburg, a long ago promise, was presented to the league by a sculptor, famous throughout the land for his noble works, even he, as Able of Holm, the name of that plastic work of art is "The Blind." Wonderful in conception, marvelous in execution. Also were there enacted whereby the league's future should be governed; among them a decision to "let go" some of the treasured shingles jealously guarded in the tribe of Goodman. This blind (?) to be used for the infirmity of the state endowment fund.

Also came into effect a law to hold the league's meetings on alternate Fridays, beginning on the second Friday in October and continuing through April. And it came to pass that a young woman known among the people as Miss Helen A. Calkins, was appointed representative for the state and city; and that subsequently she by her eloquence did induce and influence the league as a body and individually to endorse and plan for opening a public library to be used as a rest room for women.

Also came sad events. Loss of members by removal and by death of the latter too. And one of these, to show her love for and interest in the league, did will and bequeath to the league a sum of $500 dollars, to be used in augmenting its exhibition property. Three wonderful gift events, all in one year, place the league on the sun for many years to come. "Tis sweet to be remembered."

And again are noble deeds recorded of the president, through whose instrumentality many a worker together that culminated in rejoicings and gain in valuable possessions. That her supplication should have brought forth from the house of Isham in the city called New York, a portrait painted by a son called Samuel (late deceased) of that house, to be placed in the league's collection to have and to hold as a memorial to him. Samuel's name seemed upon them unbelievable—yes, too good to be true.

And so it has come to pass that the league has reached the twenty-first year of its age, and is still without a place to call its own, or metaphorically to lay its head. Should not the continuous invocation of its members be for a place where they may be "planted" and that "they shall dwell in their place and shall be moved no more; neither shall the children of wickedness waste their days from the beginning, and that it shall come to pass in the future days, that each of the league's members having remained faithful to the cause may say, "I have been with thee whithersoever thou hast walked, and have cut off all thine enemies and indifferent ones from before thee, and have made thee a name like the names of the great of the earth." A. H. Pember.

Club Happenings

THE ART LEAGUE.

This club held its annual meeting on Friday, May 21st, at the Calceonian rooms. The meeting was called to order at 2:30 by the president, Mrs. E. F. Woods. The roll call was read by the secretary, Miss Edna Goodwin, and the minutes of the last meeting were read. A response as to whether they would be active or associate members for the ensuing year. Three new members were voted into the organization: Mrs. J. R. Nichols, Miss Casford and Miss Mary Woodard. The president then announced that she would not give a report of the work, but would read brief extracts from the by-laws for the benefit of the new members. An amendment to the previous motion was passed so that the by-laws read that the first meeting of the club shall be held the second Friday in October and every alternate Friday thereafter through April, the annual meeting being in May. The report of the secretary showed that there had been twenty new members, two losses by death and one by withdrawal, so that the membership now stands at 117 members. After roll call, reports of officers were listened to with interest. Historian Kimberley gave her report and appended a write-up of "News of the Members and Their Activities" during the twelve months, by which caused much merriment. ### COMMUNITY CENTER PROVES A SUCCESS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Oseco, Wis., April 12.—The community center theory idealized by progressive educators, has passed the experimental state in Oseco. This city now has a municipal opera house, an art gallery, a moving picture theatre, a public library and a gymnasium, according to plans just launched by citizens.

One building—the school house—will house them all. The school building, which has been the scene of many public meetings, is to be torn down.
Some time ago Dwight H. Perkins, an expert of community building, came to a talk here in which he said that building a school house for community center purposes as well as the regular school, is better than building the regular school house. Also it is possible, he told the citizens, to secure the equipment for five buildings, constructed almost as cheaply as it would be secured by the one building, when completed will give Oseco a model community structure.

COOKERY DEMONSTRATION.
Club women of the O. E. S. study class and notable housewives, and it seems that the more clubs they belong to, the better cooks they become. Although they do not neglect their regular housekeeping, the one, the little behind the modern ideas and appliances used to accomplish the best results. They do not know the latest, up-to-date methods and recipes that are all the time being formulated, by experts, for their help.

But next week an opportunity is given them by the Gazette to brush up their housekeeping methods and learn many of the newest and most modern ways of home economics. The culinary expert, Miss Florence M. (BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Christiania, Norway, May 25.—The explanation that the German authorities have urged, that well-to-do German citizens to take up residence temporarily in a neutral country, so as to make conditions less hard-pressed for those who remain in Germany, has been advanced here in connection with the fact that a large number of Germans have come to Norway to live for the time being. There are also increased numbers of Germans going to the other Scandinavian countries.

MONUMENT UNVEILED MARKING ARMY SITE

Marks Trail Taken By Army of General Braddock on Leaving for Disastrous Expedition to Fort Duquesne.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Alexandria, Va., May 26.—Marking the point from which Major General Edward Braddock and his force of British regulars and Virginia troops, with Colonel George Washington as a public library and a gymnasium, according to plans just launched by citizens.

Many members of the Society of Colonial Dames, the Daughters of the American Revolution and other patriotic societies from various parts of Virginia, the District of Columbia, Maryland and Pennsylvania witnessed the presentation of the monument to officials of the city of Alexandria. Many of those present will take part tomorrow in the unveiling of a similar monument at Winchester, Virginia.

One of the old British cannon abandoned here by General Braddock surmounts the monument. For many years the cannon had stood upright in the earth at one of the city's street corners as a marker and was an object of interest to sightseers. By an act of the city council several years ago the ancient piece of ordnance, brought from England by General Braddock when he came out to Virginia as generalissimo of all the British forces in the American colonies in the war against the French, was turned over to the Mount Vernon Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. That organization today formally presented it to the Virginia Colonial Dames, under whose auspices the monument was erected.

Forming the base of the monument and mounting the old cannon are other relics of by-gone days in the shape of cobblestones which for more than a century had served the city of Alexandria as paving in some of its principal streets and which show the favorably worn by the artillery and transport of the northern armies during the civil war. The stones are said by tradition to have been laid on Alexandria streets by Hessian soldiers captured in the war of the revolution by the Continental troops.

NEW NORMAL SCHOOLS URGED BY EDUCATORS

Leading State Educators Unite in Urging That Two New Normal Schools Be Created.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., May 26.—Leading state educators united in informing the joint finance committee of the legislature of the need of normal schools in northeastern Wisconsin yesterday afternoon, when the Albers bill providing for two new normal schools in that section was up for hearing. Theodore Kronschaft, president of the board of normal schools, described the region as an empire, in which no institution of higher education exists. Pointing to the fact that the normal schools draw the greater proportion of their students from fifty-mile radius, he said northeastern Wisconsin is peculiarly neglected in this respect.

provision for normal school facilities. He lauded the policy of Wisconsin, Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania in multiplying their normal schools as a wiser plan than Iowa's one school system.

President C. G. Pearce of the Milwaukee normal school, Superintendent William Mine of Merrill, Superintendent S. B. Tobey of Wausau, Superintendent B. E. Nelson of Racine, Superintendent M. N. McIver of Oshkosh, Superintendent G. H. Landgraf of Marinette, and Attorney F. J. Pincus of Antigo spoke favorably of the plan at the afternoon hearing, which was continued in the evening. The educators were agreed that the district was in vital need of normal schools. The survey of that region's educational facilities has convinced several of the wisdom of the Albers bill.

AT MYERS THEATRE.
Sheehan Opera Company Coming in the Greatest Success of the Season. Cleopatra and Cavallaria Rusticana.
"It is indeed gratifying," said Joseph P. Sheehan, the famous tenor, who is coming to the Myers Theatre Sunday evening, May 30th, with his company for a performance of the season's sensation, Cleopatra and Cavallaria Rusticana, "to see that gradually the public are beginning to realize that grand opera does not mean something intended only for the musician. This applies particularly to those operas which are interesting from a dramatic standpoint, as well as those in their music, and of all these, none quite so well as the bill as does this wonderful performance of Cleopatra and Cavallaria Rusticana."
"Given in English, as we do it, Cavallaria Rusticana is as interesting as any drama ever staged. The audience is kept at high pitch every moment."
"Besides the strong dramatic side to Cavallaria Rusticana, there is the most beautiful and tuneful music. From a standpoint of melody alone no comic opera can compare with it. What comic opera has such beautiful numbers as the picturesque "Drink, drink, drink" and the wonderful "Intermezzo" the famous duet between Santuzza and Turiddu and others too numerous to mention? And when one considers that in addition to this beautiful music the performance includes a kept at high pitch every moment "Cleopatra," the most talked of opera of the age, it is little wonder that our season has been a veritable triumph."

AT MYERS THEATRE.
Synopsis of "Jane Eyre."
In Four Parts.
Jane Eyre, engaged as governess for little Adele in the Rochester home—leaves to accept the new position. The day of her arrival at Thornfield Hall she accidentally met the owner in the grounds, and they are immediately informed with one another, although Mr. Rochester had been paying attention to Lady Ingram and intended to marry her as soon as the courts released him of his insane wife. Mr. Rochester was exceedingly anxious that the new governess, Jane Eyre, should not know of the existence of his insane wife. As days passed by they became more and more acquainted, to the point that Rochester was willing to break off his engagement with Lady Ingram and enter into a secret marriage with Jane Eyre without disclosing to her the existence of his wife, and the fact that he had no right to contract a legal marriage with anybody else. Mr. Rochester, his maniacal wife's brother, paid a visit to his sister-in-law to inquire about the state of his sister's health, and found her in such a violent state that he consented to her being under the treatment of a doctor. He also discovered that Rochester intended to marry Jane Eyre, and took the means by the aid of Attorney Briggs to stop the marriage as it was about to be consummated in the past night. Under the circumstances, Jane Eyre, in her despair left Thornfield Hall to seek employment, she knew not where. In her travels she accidentally met her friend, Mr. Rivers, whom she had often met at Thornfield Hall, and told him her reasons for quitting her position. Mr. Rivers, who had taken quite a fancy to Jane and seized the opportunity of her sorrows, being about to start as a missionary, proposed marriage to her. In the meantime Rochester's maniacal wife had managed to secure the key of her room and had strolled through the house, getting possession of a lamp that was left burning in one of the halls and took it to her room and there in her insane rapture, dropped the lamp which exploded and set fire to the beautiful mansion. Rochester, being awakened by smoke pouring into his room, quickly aroused the other members of his household and urged them to get out, whilst he went to his wife's room in the attempt to save her life. In doing so he was blinded by the flames, and there being rescued by the butler was taken out into the grounds, calling in his blindness "Jane, Jane, Jane." Jane Eyre heard the cry of distress, left the Reverend Mr. Rivers home and sought Thornfield Hall to find the family on the lawn and the house entirely gutted. She inquired for Rochester's whereabouts and was directed by the servants to a rocky cliff. She sought and found him there, just on the brink, and now his wife having perished in the flames, Rochester was able legally to marry Jane Eyre, who became the mother of little Adele and the sight of Rochester.

BARTON'S EXPERIMENT

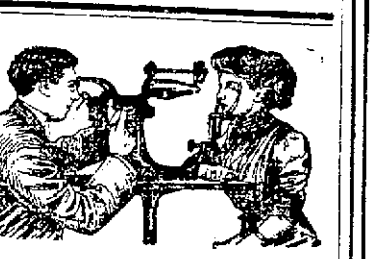

By FRANK FILSON.
(Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Chapman.)
John Barton had fallen in love with Lucy Dean after the first germ of his deadly purpose had sowed itself in his mind. Once there, they had taken root and flourished, so that not even the new interest in his life could prevent their development.
The idea possessed him, body and soul. Since boyhood the temptation had come to him at idle moments when he was vaguely dissatisfied with life. But he had always fought it down and conquered with sheer will power.
He knew, however, that the law could never touch him. He knew that he could carry out this design with impunity, holding the harrowing knowledge of it in his own soul until the day of discovery.
Love comes unexpectedly enough, and Barton's soul was torn in twain after Lucy had promised to be his wife. Yet, as he might, he could not withstand the prompting of that impulse within. He had given rein to it too long.
He had a month's vacation every summer. That would be ample time in which to set his purpose, though his plan would not come to full fruition for two or three months longer. However, it was only necessary to start, and, automatically, the train that he had fired would smolder until, without intervention upon his part, the ripe fruits of his enterprise became manifest.
Barton had rented a little furnished cottage in a remote region of the Adirondacks, where his only neighbors were a few woodmen.
He made some miserable excuse to Lucy to cover his absence for so long a period, and disappeared from the haunts of his friends. And, the evening after his departure from the Grand Central station found him in the little cottage, alone, staring out moodily across the lake.
The clay-colored chemical which was so essential a feature of his design stood on the little bare table in the room which he had selected for his operations.
He had the formula calculated to a nicety. All that was necessary was time for the chemical combinations to become permanent and to produce their rich crop of results. The experiment had been performed many times since man emerged from barbarism, but less and less often as he became enlightened, and of recent years so seldom that its very infrequency was John Barton's greatest asset of safety.
It was on the fifth morning after his arrival that he received a letter from Lucy.
"My dearest John," she wrote, "I am becoming very uneasy about your going up to that out-of-the-way place in the Adirondacks, where you are all by yourself. Mother wants you to come back at once and spend the rest of the month with us at Atlantic Beach."
"I am greatly concerned about you, dear, and unless you write me that you are coming on the next train, I shall begin to think you do not love me."
The sight of Lucy's delicate handwriting brought back to him with a rush all the memory of their love. How fond they had been of each other! How the knowledge that she loved him had temporarily driven the thought of his purpose out of his mind. And how miserably he had striven to avoid that insistent temptation that came knocking at his heart!
But the experiment was under way, and, more, it was succeeding. There was no doubt of that. Science was infallible, and her laws absolute. And he had used only a tenth part of the clay-colored chemical, with its faint, aromatic smell, so subtle an agent in his great task, and yet apparently so innocuous.
John answered Lucy's letter, excusing himself on the ground that he needed perfect rest, and remained in his cottage.
Then the day of decision dawned. There was a letter from Lucy. John could hardly steady his fingers to tear it open.
"My dear John," it began, "since receiving your last letter I have felt very much hurt at your refusal to spend your holiday with us. I hoped that you would write again, and I have waited every day to hear from you. I was too proud to answer you. But now, dear John, I have come to the conclusion that you could not have treated me thus unless something serious were the matter. And so mother and I are coming up to Cranberry Lake to see you. We shall start tomorrow, and the day after you receive this, we shall be at your station. I hope you will meet us there, John, and remove my suspense—and mother's."

And now the die was cast, and the man's struggle between love and the dreadful task to which he had set himself was renewed more acutely than ever. None can know what a mental struggle he endured during the rest of that day. For, if he destroyed the results of his experiment he knew that he could not nerve himself to begin anew.
But the thought of Lucy conquered. As the gray dawn came stealing into his room, after a sleepless night, John emptied the clay-colored fluid out of the window. Then, taking a razor from the bottom of his bag, desperately, wildly, he shaved off his moustache.

Reviews Trip To Fisher Farm With Students

Allen B. West.
One of the interesting and instructive trips made by the high school students in agriculture recently was the trip to the John L. Fisher farm, near Willowdale.
At the invitation of Mr. Fisher and the high school teacher in agriculture they were accompanied by a party of university students in farm management who were taking data in the vicinity under the instruction of Prof. Gunn. Through the kindness of Mr. Fisher and members of the Commercial club, arrangements were made to cover the entire party to the farm in automobiles. With the business men who accompanied the students the party numbered about fifty, two of whom were young women who are taking the course in agriculture at the university. One of these is a Chicago girl who, having fallen heir to a 500 acre farm in Michigan, is taking the course in order to fit herself to manage her farm. The chief attraction at the Fisher farm is the stock, good grade and pure bred Holsteins and pure bred Duroc Jersey hogs, and the party of visitors were not only interested in seeing them but in knowing something of how they were acquired and the history of the farm.
Seven years ago when Mr. Fisher bought the farm of two hundred acres it was a tobacco farm, and the land had been mined to such an extent that the first year it produced only eight bushels to the acre. Last year it produced fifty-six bushels to the acre, just seven times what it produced seven years ago. This change was brought about by putting stock on the farm and entirely changing the system of farming. Mr. Fisher tore down the tobacco sheds, put up a silo and put on grade Holsteins with a pure bred bull, and has been working for the improvement of his herd. His herd now numbers seventy-six, with seven registered cows and six registered heifers and two bulls. Mr. Fisher's latest acquisition is a fine animal worthy of special mention being half brother to King Segis Pontiac Chicago, the bull sold in June 1914, for $20,000. His sire, King Segis Pontiac, has more sons at the head of good herds than any other bull, while his dam and his sire's dam are cows of good records for production. This stock is housed in a barn that Mr. Fisher built for this purpose since he came into possession of the farm.
Mr. Fisher's Duroc Jersey hogs are fine animals. He pointed out to the students the excellent points, strong backs, broad shoulders and hams and good legs.
From two of the sows which cost him $25 each, Mr. Fisher has sold during the past year $110 worth of stock, retaining the best sow pig and six sow pigs, the same number of individuals as he sold, but better than those, for Mr. Fisher understands that if he is to improve his stock he must keep his best animals.
About four years ago Mr. Fisher put in alfalfa, and now he has about five acres. As Mr. Fisher is a professional man and hires all of the work done on his farm, it is interesting to know whether under these circumstances he has been able to make the farm, run down as it was when purchased, pay financially, as one is so frequently told that one can not hope to make anything on a farm if he must hire everything done. The facts are that Mr. Fisher's farm has not only paid all running expenses, but has paid for the improvements mentioned. It has not paid for the silo and put on grade Holsteins build up a herd and the next few years will bring returns in this department. His success has been due to the building up of his farm by putting on good stock and then by producing such feeds as are best adapted to their needs. Cows, pigs, corn, silage and alfalfa have been the factors spelling success.

Preparing for the Future.

Frank, who had just entered school, came home one day and began fighting his brother, two years younger. His mother protested at such performance, when he turned to her and said: "Mamma, I have to teach him to fight because when he goes to school some day I may not be with him if a fellow hits him, and he must know how to fight."

IS FRIEND OF THE BLIND

Mrs. Woodruff, Whose Sight Was Restored by an Operation, Now Works for the Sightless.

It was due to cruel, hard fate that the people are indebted for "The Lady of the Lighthouse," for it was because of her blindness that Mrs. Helen S. Woodruff was forced back upon the inner recesses of her nature and out of her terrifying experience was enabled to give forth the sweetness and light of the story that made her famous. Mrs. Woodruff is a beautiful, delightful woman of old southern stock, and she inherits all the traditions, loveliness and charming qualities which only the true southern environment can give.

It was two years ago when she was suddenly deprived of her sight and despaired of ever seeing God's beautiful sunshine again. It was in this hour of trial that the wonderful qualities of her nature appeared, and patiently she learned to "see through her fingers" and obtained "light through work." It was during this period that she conceived that wonderful story which has made her famous and which has done so much to aid the cause for the relief of the blind. After two years of patient resignation her sight was restored through the marvelous operation of a specialist. So grateful was she to the people who had aided her in the time of her affliction, and so much did she feel for the thousands of other unfortunate blind, that she has devoted nearly all her time and energy for the benefit of the New York Association for the Blind, which has established the original "Lighthouse" in New York.

Roses and Chrysanthemums. There are nearly eight hundred known varieties of roses and more than four hundred chrysanthemums.

UNDERWRITING BILL STRIKES SNAG WHEN BEFORE COMMITTEE

Bennett Bill for Regulation of Fire Insurance Rates Is Opposed by Companies in Hearing.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., May 25.—That the Bennett bill for the regulation of fire insurance rates would, if enacted into law, drive the insurance companies into politics, was the statement of Gustav Wollweber, Jr., president of the Concordia Fire Insurance company of Milwaukee. He attacked the figures showing high profits in the fire insurance business as presented by insurance commissioner Ekern and said that the companies would not continue in business did they not believe that ultimately "the era of legislation will be ended." He denounced the measure as one that would confiscate property. O. B. Ryan, representing the National Board of Fire Underwriters, said that the passage of the bill might reduce the profits of the thirteen larger fire companies operating in the state, but that it would operate to drive the smaller companies, which there were about 120, out of business. Insurance Commissioner Ekern said that the citizens of Wisconsin were being charged too much in fire insurance rates. He said that the excess profits taken out of Wisconsin amounted to $2,000,000 annually for the past four years, and an average of $1,500,000 for the past ten years. He told how the rates on dwellings had been kept high in Wisconsin until the fire insurance investigation two years ago, and how they tumbled as the committee advanced in its public hearings from city to city. He said that Milwaukee had one of the most efficient fire departments in the country, but that the rate on dwellings was from 22 to 35 percent, while in Buffalo, with an equal amount of fire protection the rate was 25 cents. He said that the Wisconsin loss rate the past year was 50.7 cents. Mr. Ryan declared there was no demand for the bill. He charged that the laws of Iowa, Minnesota and Illinois had originated with Commissioner Ekern. He declared that not a person in the state was asking for a lower insurance rate. Instead of the Bennett bill he advocated the passage of an anti-discrimination law, which he said would accomplish every laudable purpose. He contended that the bill placed too much power in the hands of the insurance commissioner. Mr. Wollweber declared that the passage of the bill would build up a giant octopus in this state. Rates were being steadily decreased as it was, he said, without harsh legislation.

HAVE BATHING TRAIN FOR RUSSIAN TROOPS

Special Equipped Train Run Near Battle Line to Allow Soldiers to Keep Clean.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Dadzivilov, Poland, May 25.—Every day in the trenches around Brest, west of Warsaw, sees detachments of some 200 Russian soldiers scrambling through the forest in the rear for an evergreen sponge with which to scrub their bodies in a bathing train nearby. Like school children on a picnic, the overworked soldiers, after having dined for a week under almost continuous fire, frolic in the woods as they vie with each other in finding the best piece of foliage which can be used as a rude sort of sponge or brush.

The bathing train to which they then repair is made up of a string of nine baggage cars along the railroad line running from Brest to Warsaw. The cars are provided with steam pipes and the manner of a Turkish bath, and the floors are grooved to let the water run off freely. Although each car easily accommodates thirty soldiers at a time, all nine cars are occupied day and night as one lot of men after another arrives for the weekly bath, which is compulsory.

The first stage of the bath is a disinfecting car where the soldiers leave their clothes and rid themselves of the vermin.

After an hour in the Turkish bath, the bathers proceed into a car at the other end of the train, where clean linen is stored and where their disinfected uniforms have been brought, to be claimed by checks. The soldiers finally emerge from the last car, shaved, sleek and smiling.

The village of Brest is also interesting as a Red Cross center. This bureau also takes the form of a train, wherein international sleeping cars, with every luxury known to travel, are stationed a staff of doctors and nurses. There is also an operating train at this point but only the most serious cases are taken there. The field hospital, however, which is a large circular tent is commonly crowded with wounded.

One of the nurses in this field hospital is a Madame G., whose husband commands a division which is operating only a few miles from where she is caring for the wounded. Many of the patients which she treats belong to her husband's division. Another nurse comes from the Baltic provinces, and her brother is fighting in the German army. But if her allegiance is divided, not a sign of this appears in her painstaking efforts to make the wounded comfortable. She has initiated a series of checker contests in the hospital tent, and this sport has become so popular that one sees almost every day a long line of freshly wounded waiting for their turn at the game.

Old Knee Joint.

Estimated by scientists to be from 250,000 to 275,000 years old, the petrified knee joint of a mammoth was unearthed at Long Beach, Cal., by workmen twenty-eight feet below the surface. The discovery has been presented to the chamber of commerce by Anton Cheroske, the finder. The knee joint of the largest species of animals that ever roamed the earth is well preserved, despite its great age. It measures 15 inches in length and 13 inches in diameter.

Helen Smythe.

Little Helen Smythe was rescued from the sea, when the Lusitania was torpedoed, by Ernest Cowper, a journalist of Toronto, Canada. She is unaware of the fate of her father, mother, sister, brother and aunt who were aboard the ill-fated ship with her when it went down.

Why?

Why should one try to "catch a weasel asleep?" Because when awake, weasels are practically expert in eluding capture. It is scarcely possible, says "The Reason Why," to imagine an animal sleeping more soundly than the weasel does when once it gives itself up to rest. It may be taken up by the head, the heels, or the tail, and swung about for a considerable time before it begins to awake.

Why He Does Not "Ring True."

A small piece of foreign substance falling into the bell metal will ruin the resonance and music of the bell. That is what we mean when we say that such a man does not "ring true;" some foreign substance has got into the casting of his life.

TO SAVE TIRE BILLS

DEVICE WILL BE WELCOMED BY AUTOMOBILE OWNERS.

Invention It Is Claimed Will Insure the Inflation of the Tire While Car Is Running.

Nowadays the bugbear of motoring is the matter of tire repairs, notwithstanding the demountable rims and spare wheels on which are inflated tires which may be put on in a few moments. Even with these conveniences the motorist is not aware of the fact that his tire is greatly underinflated and that to continue running the car while the tire is in this condition means absolute ruin of the casing and tube and a heavy cost for a replacement.

If what one Chicago manufacturer has brought out proves all that is claimed for it, it will save many a tire bill, to say nothing of the work that comes in the way of fitting new casings either on the road or at home. This is a system for inflating the tire when the car is running. The air pressure is generated by a pump attached to the motor and is carried through pipes to the axle and then to the wheel hubs and to the tire. A rotary joint at the hub is comprised of two disks moving upon each other, one attached to the axle and the other revolving with the hub, the latter having a deep groove, into which extends a flange from the other disk bearing a U-shaped gasket, which is expanded by the air pressure against the sides of the groove, forming an air chamber in the revolving hub, from which air is carried by a metal tube to the air valve in the tire.

There are several devices which may be termed safety valves which, if attached to the tire, will permit a release of air in case of overinflation, thus removing the possibility of too much pressure. These valves may be set for any desired pressure, according to the size of the tire used and the temperature and the road condition.

Differential and Universal.

The object of the differential is to compensate the difference in travel of the rear wheels. In turning corners the inside wheel must turn less than the outside wheel. The differential permits the wheels to turn at different speeds and at the same time receive equal drive power from the engine, thus obviating unnecessary strains and slipping of wheels. Even in straight-forward driving the differential performs important duties, in that when one drive-wheel hits an obstruction the differential prevents the torque strain which otherwise would be transmitted through the whole drive mechanism.

The object of the universal joints is to permit the transmission of power through shafts rotating at different angles or not in alignment. In the shaft-drive automobile the transmission of power from the power plant to the rear axle would be impossible without universal joints in the drive shaft, since the angle of the drive shaft constantly changes. This is due to the power plant, or one end of the drive shaft being mounted above the springs and the axle or other end of the shaft below the springs. The spring action causes the difference in angle of the connecting shaft.

Auto Market in East India.

The possibilities of the Dutch East Indies automobile market are shown by the 1913 import figures. Automobiles numbering 1,280 and valued at $1,633,000 were imported. The Netherlands ranked first with 490 cars, and the United States second with 260, which were valued at $250,000. One hundred and twelve cars were imported from France, 105 from Germany, 80 from Great Britain, 60 from Belgium, 50 from Italy and 50 from Singapore.

Protect Magneto From Dust.

Magnetos should be protected from dust as well as moisture. The unprotected magneto will accumulate dust from the air currents of the fan, and this adhering dust will retain moisture where a short circuit may seriously interfere with the ignition. The time is coming when all magnetos will be enclosed.
